

Kawagoe is a perfect place to enjoy the true gem of Japan. Within an hour drive from Tokyo will take you to the city of Kawagoe and a trip back in time to Edo period when Tokyo first flourished as the capital of Japan.

Especially, Kawagoe will never let you down you are a huge fan of the Tokugawa Shogunate. Kita-in Temple keeps rooms relocated from Edo castle; the nursery of Shogun Iemitsu and his nanny, Kasuga-no- tsubone. There is no where in Japan where you get to see the original rooms of Edo castle, as Edo castle was burnt down by fire. Moreover, the rooms are preserved in a good condition and you can actually go inside to take an up-close and personal look at how the Shogun may have been being a toddler.

I would recommend it to tourists with a limited time in Tokyo or in Japan but expect to see some historical sites and a stretch of street with beautiful Japanese architecture.
