

Peace Memorial Museum

The Peace Memorial Museum is located in Hiroshima Peace Memorial Park. This museum exhibit presents the facts of the atomic bombing, with the aims of contributing to the abolition of nuclear weapons throughout the world, and of promoting world peace through a large collection of photographs and objects that belonged to the victims. It is the most popular of Hiroshima's destinations for school field-trips from all over Japan and for international visitors, too. The number of visitors is over one million per year. The architect of the main building was the work of Kenzo Tange.
